

Anatomy of a WebBrochure

MyWebBrochure.com

Stationery for the Web

MyWebBrochure is designed around a basic format. A theme determines how your WebBrochure looks but there are some parts of the WebBrochure that always stay in the same place. Here are examples of three different themes with the same content. Theme A has a thin top, no frame, left border, and no footer area graphically defined. Theme B has a large top, uses a frame and a gradition of the background to define the left border.

Theme Type

Theme Type
C

Theme C uses graphics to define all the areas of the WebBrochure.

Theme Type

You can add as many themes to your library as you want and as you can see the layout always stays the same. Title goes in the top area. Picture or logo in the first frame. Email, if used is in the next frame under the picture or logo. Your content appears to the right and goes down as far as you want or until you put in a page break.

Each block of text has to have a title to let your audience know what the paragraph is about. You can add one picture and one attachment to every paragraph.
